Planner Jenny Axmacher reviewed the staff report and presentation. She stated the request is the first step in the PUD zoning process which would allow an early and informal evaluation to assist the applicant in a future PUD Zone Document submittal. No formal action is required by the Planning Commission.

Applicant Brad Chapman, 2 N Cascade Avenue, Colorado Springs, stated Schuck Communities is based out of Colorado Springs and has been in business for over 50 years. Schuck Communities is currently under contract to purchase the land. Mr. Chapman stated business interest has been well received for Nexus at DIA thanks to Economic Development efforts. The proposed PUD zoning would allow many different land uses that are not available in straight zone districts. He stated road connectivity is not being proposed via 88th Avenue, a landscape buffer would be added along the border to the Rocky Mountain Arsenal National Wildlife Refuge, and utilities would be onsite. Development is not proposed in the floodplain.

The Commission discussed the proposed layout of gas easement, distance from nearest residential area, and proposed connectivity plans. In response to questions from the Commission, the applicant stated they are involved in a focus group that provides input for the Aerotropolis project. The site was selected due to a combination of timing, success at DIA Tech Center, connectivity, and regional location.

The Commission expressed their general support of the request and thanked the applicant for their presentation. They believe the proposed office flex plan would create a good transition between the industrial uses at DIA Tech Center and the existing residential area. The proposal would also create an opportunity to invite more businesses to develop in the City.
