REQUEST

The Commerce City Cultural Council is requesting City Council approval of a replacement public art piece for the stolen bronze Cocklebur statue in Pioneer Park at the corner of E. 60th Avenue and Monaco Street. The new piece, "Cocklebur Reimagined," aims to continue honoring the horse and its owner while changing the format/medium to avoid vandalism and theft issues that plagued the original piece. The selected art was unanimously approved by the Cultural Council, which advances tonight's resolution for City Council approval.

BACKGROUND

The city's public art program funds include a 10% contribution from CIP projects for maintenance costs associated with city-owned public art pieces. Due to multiple instances where the previous statue was damaged and/or stolen, the Art Selection Committee chose to replace the stolen statue by soliciting a different art medium. Cocklebur was the horse of Catherine Conter, who kept the horse on her Commerce City property for nearly 20 years. Cultural Council oversees the art selection process and convened an Art Selection Committee for CALU Park from January through May. The committee set the art selection criteria, reviewed artist proposals, and selected semifinalists to interview. Semifinalists presented their proposals to the committee and artist Robert Bell's 3D mural was the selected piece. On May 20, 2025, the Cultural Council voted unanimously to approve the artwork and formally advance the recommendation to City Council for final approval.
