Gardening Method: Tres Hermanas

The Three Sisters (Spanish: tres hermanas) are the three main agricultural crops of various indigenous people of Central and North America: squash, maize ("corn"), and climbing beans (typically tepary beans or common beans). Traditionally, several Native American groups planted sunflowers on the north edges of their gardens as a "fourth sister." In a technique known as companion planting, the maize and beans are often planted together in mounds formed by hilling soil around the base of the plants each year; squash is typically planted between the mounds. The cornstalk serves as a trellis for climbing beans, the beans fix nitrogen in their root nodules and stabilize the maize in high winds, and the wide leaves of the squash plant shade the ground, keeping the soil moist and helping prevent the establishment of weeds.

About the Character

Rosalina Solis is a 16-year-old Latina teen. She is gentle, thoughtful, and deeply empathetic, she's a melancholic soul who cares fiercely about her community and the environment. A dedicated volunteer at her local community garden, Rosalina spends her time thrifting, crafting DIY projects, tutoring classmates, and dreaming of a cleaner, greener city.

After accidentally cutting herself on a shard of glass tainted with an experimental serum while picking up litter, Rosalina awakens to chlorokinetic powers, the ability to control and accelerate plant growth, even sustaining herself through photosynthesis. Now secretly a superhero, she uses her abilities to fight pollution and restore life to neglected spaces. However, pollution and cold weather weaken her, making it harder to breathe and causing plants around her to wither.

Despite her courage, Rosalina struggles with ordinary teenage worries, getting her driver's license, talking to her crush (who happens to be connected to a powerful oil executive), and balancing hero work with family life alongside her parents and younger sister. Driven by hope, she dreams of transforming her city into a place of clean air, fresh food, and thriving green spaces.
